

Transcript: “Careers at the OIG: Program Analyst, Audit Division” June 2017

My name is Nicola Whitehead, and I am an Assistant Region Audit Manager in Philadelphia. I've been with the OIG for twelve years. I have a background in classical music. I was a classical flutist; I also did musical theater in my former life. However, I later decided to go back to school for criminal justice. Ever since I was young, the one thing I didn't want to do was just sit behind a desk. And what I luckily found out with the OIG is that in some ways there's never a dull moment. My favorite part about working at the OIG is the diversity of the work. I've worked on federal residential re-entry centers, otherwise known as halfway houses; police departments; the Republican National Convention; non-profit organizations; tobacco diversion; FBI seaport security. So I really enjoy the diversity and really getting to you know, I guess, figure it out over and over again.

To learn more about opportunities at the Office of the Inspector General, please check out our website at oig.justice.gov.