

Transcript: “Careers at the OIG: Special Agent” June 2017

I’m Sarah Lake, I’m an Assistant Special Agent in Charge, or ASAC. I’ve been with the OIG about 7 years. I was with another OIG where I was a special agent before I came here. This OIG has a lot of flexibility and upward mobility. I’ve been an ASAC with the OIG for about a year and a half. I pursued the ASAC position because I wanted to contribute to the OIG mission as a whole, as well as a broader view of the Investigations Division. I think the most rewarding part of my job is really being able to facilitate what agents need and having the cases come to a good resolution. We’re stewards of the public, basically, and we need to make sure that things being run correctly.
