A Message from the Inspector General

Thank you for your interest in joining the Office of the Inspector General (OIG) for the Department of Justice. The OIG seeks to promote integrity, efficiency, and effectiveness in Department operations, and improve the operation of the Department in tangible ways.

The OIG plays an integral role in the Department of Justice and is recognized within and outside the Department for its objective oversight. Our audits, evaluations, investigations, and special reviews examine key Department programs and allegations of misconduct by Department employees. Importantly, OIG reviews offer not only an assessment of the program, but also recommendations for improvement. We are seeking motivated, dedicated, and talented professionals who can help further our mission. If you are ready for a rewarding career, then we encourage you to apply for a position with the OIG.

Who We’re Looking For

The Investigations Division seeks highly motivated and dedicated investigators who have law enforcement or investigative experience. Many of our Special Agents are seasoned investigators who come to the OIG from other law enforcement agencies, including the FBI, U.S. Secret Service, and other OIGs. Additional factors that will be considered when choosing Special Agent candidates are academic background, analytical ability, oral and written communications skills, maturity, physical stamina, and mental stability.

What to Expect

To apply for a position with the OIG, you must be a U.S. citizen. Because you may have access to classified or sensitive information, you must undergo a background investigation and drug testing.

Law enforcement salaries are based on the federal general schedule (GS) rates, which may be adjusted annually. To view current pay rates, visit the Office of Personnel Management website at www.opm.gov.

The Federal Advantage

As an OIG Special Agent, you are eligible for a comprehensive benefits package, including a competitive salary; Law Enforcement Availability Pay; an array of health, life, and long-term care insurance programs for yourself and your family; flexible spending accounts; employer contributions to retirement savings plans; career development programs; leave allowances; paid holidays; flexible work schedules; telework; and travel reimbursement when conducting your duties.

Visit www.opm.gov for an overview of benefits currently offered to federal employees.
Special Agents in the Department of Justice OIG are well-trained, federal employees who have developed excellent investigative skills and expertise. Our Special Agents promote integrity within the Department, help detect and deter waste, fraud, or abuse, and investigate allegations of criminal and serious administrative misconduct against employees, contractors, and grantees of the FBI, DEA, BOP, ATF, USMS, USAO, and other Department of Justice components that play a central role in protecting the safety and liberty of all Americans.

Working in the Investigations Division, our Special Agents conduct both individual investigations and sometimes work in teams with other OIG Special Agents. They have statutory law enforcement authority to seek and execute arrest and search warrants, serve subpoenas, perform undercover operations, and carry firearms. They also investigate allegations of serious administrative misconduct. They are responsible for handling investigations from start to finish, whether criminal charges, administrative sanctions, or exoneration is appropriate.

Our emphasis on broad and diverse backgrounds ensures that our Special Agents are among the best law enforcement professionals in the federal community. They utilize their law enforcement, analytical, and critical thinking skills when performing sensitive investigations. Throughout their career at the OIG, they are provided with expert training to keep their investigative skills sharp.

Investigations conducted by our Special Agents lead to arrests, criminal indictments, convictions or guilty pleas, and administrative actions against employees, contractors, grantees, or civilians.
Results of Our Work

- A sentence of 3 years in prison and a $15,000 fine for a FBI Special Agent who tampered with and ingested heroin that had been seized as evidence in support of FBI and task force drug investigations, and then attempted to avoid detection by replacing the missing heroin with cutting agents and by altering evidence custody documents.

- A 120-month prison term and $614,500 in restitution for a U.S. Congressman for his role in participating in a racketeering conspiracy, which included the misuse of hundreds of thousands of dollars of federal, charitable, and campaign.

- The guilty plea and 52-month prison sentence for a BOP Correctional Officer for distributing heroin to an inmate at the penitentiary and providing prohibited objects, including a cellular telephone and tobacco.

- A 3-year prison term and restitution of more than $136,000 for an FBI Special Agent who pleaded guilty to misappropriating over $136,000 of drug proceeds seized during the execution of three search warrants, falsifying FBI documentation, and forging a witness signature to conceal the theft.

- A sentence of 6.5 years in prison and $340,000 in restitution for a DEA Special Agent who stole digital currency during an investigation of an operation within the dark Internet.

- Settlements paid to the government totaling more than $17 million to resolve allegations that telecommunications providers overcharged federal law enforcement agencies for wiretaps and pen registers.

- Payment of $3 million by a government contractor to resolve False Claims Act allegations involving the manufacture and sale of defective military helmets by the contractor and BOP’s Federal Prison Industries’ to the U.S. Army.

- The resignation of a presidentially appointed DOJ official who improperly used an official government travel charge card to purchase goods and services while not on official travel in violation of the Government Accounting Office travel regulations.
The Investigations Division

The Investigations Division investigates allegations of bribery, fraud, abuse, civil rights violations, and violations of other laws and procedures made against Department of Justice employees, contractors, and grantees, as well as civilians who attempt to subvert a Department program. These investigations can be criminal or administrative. We are responsible for developing cases for criminal prosecution and civil or administrative action. In addition, we make recommendations for corrective action when an investigation identifies a weakness in an internal Department policy, practice, procedure, or program. Annually, the Investigations Division receives more than 12,000 complaints of misconduct and opens approximately 300 investigations. We analyze each allegation and investigate the most serious, referring others to the individual Department components’ internal affairs offices. Many investigations lead to prosecutive or administrative actions, such as criminal indictments, arrests, terminations, and disciplinary action. In addition, OIG investigations result in hundreds of thousands of dollars in fines, recoveries, seizures, and civil penalties. The Investigations Division has field and area offices located throughout the United States.

Office of the Inspector General

In 1989, the OIG was created in the Department of Justice to promote economy, efficiency, and effectiveness in the Department’s programs and practices. The OIG is an independent unit in the Department of Justice, a characteristic that is crucial to our ability to objectively pursue criminal and administrative misconduct, fraud, waste, and abuse, and to promote efficiency and effectiveness throughout the Department of Justice.

As one of the premier federal inspector general offices, the Department of Justice OIG conducts audits, evaluations, reviews, and investigations of some of the federal government’s highest profile and most important agencies, including the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA), Federal Bureau of Prisons (BOP), U.S. Marshals Service (USMS), Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives (ATF), and U.S. Attorneys’ Offices (USAO). Each year, our office identifies millions of dollars in wasted funds; makes recommendations to save millions of dollars more; issues audit, evaluation, and special reports that contain important findings; and conducts hundreds of investigations that lead to arrests, administrative actions, and criminal prosecutions.
